A Nazi Airship was shot down by the Coastal Artillery at Fort Mott while trying a daring night time raid to steal copper rain gutters off of the Peace Magazine. Captain Andrew Grant quickly brought the guns at Battery Arnold to bear on the ill fated air ship, blowing it out of the sky with one salvo from the 12” guns. Unfortunately there were no remnants of the airship, crew or copper rain gutters.

COMMANDER THWARTS ATTEMPT BY GERMAN UNABOMBER

Commander Giannobile shown here disposing of V-1 Rocket Fuel the German Unabomber tried to use in an attempt to blow up the 9th Division’s Enlisted Man’s Club (“the Devil’s Den). Although the saboteur got away Giannobile is credited for saving the day, when asked of the ordeal afterwards he only commented, “Where’s my pocket knife and cigar?”

GERMAN UNABOMBER ESCAPES!

The German Unabomber (army artist sketch below) continues to elude Allied Forces with clever disguises as shown.

His most recent attempt of sabotage was failed when Commander Giannobile noticed the Unabomber sneaking V1 Rocket Fuel into an enlisted man’s club with the hopes of igniting with the cigarette from an unsuspecting GI. Giannobile, potentially sacrificing his own life, saw the Rocket Fuel and quickly consumed it but lost his garrison cap, rabbit’s foot and P38 can opener in the process. Commander Giannobile has ordered all personnel to be on the look out for said missing items AND the Unabomber.
